

Introductory Note and Program

Online Conference
from April 28th to May 10th, 2021

In collaboration with its partners, the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), together with UEMOA and CILSS and their technical and financial partners, particularly the European Union, the French Development Agency (AFD) and the Spanish Agency for Cooperation and International Development (AECID), is set to organize a high-level international online conference from April 28th to May 10th, 2021. The conference includes a technical component and a high-level political one and is meant to be a platform for sharing and reflection on food security storage experiences in West Africa and other regions of Africa and the world. It will also be a moment of political dialogue between the West African Region and its partners in order to create a consensus on the need to strengthen the capacities of West Africa to appropriately face the upcoming food, nutrition, and pastoral crises.

It follows five years of implementation of the Regional Storage Strategy adopted in 2012, with the support of the European Union. This strategy deploys a regional storage system based on four lines of defense for a coordinated response to face cyclical crises: decentralized local stocks, national stocks, the Regional Food Security Reserve created in 2013, which is made up of a physical stock (1/3) and a financial reserve (2/3) and the resort to international aid, when no solution can be found at the first three lines of defense.

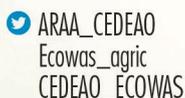

The achievements, challenges and important lessons learned in the first three lines of defense led ECOWAS authorities, in consultation with their national, regional, and international partners, to organize this conference.

The overall objective of the conference is to lay the foundations for a renewed multilateral partnership to strengthen, in a sustainable manner, the resilience of the regional storage system and its capacity to respond efficiently to the amplification and complexity of food, nutrition, and pastoral crises.

Specifically, it aims to:

- Conduct a retrospective analysis and make a projection by 2030 of the region's vulnerability to food and nutrition insecurity and its implications for storage systems in a context of increasing and multiplying risks,
- Share the West African experience of food reserves at the three levels (achievements, lessons, and challenges) and those of other regions of Africa and the world and discuss the place of food storage systems in responding to cyclical crises, strengthening the resilience of the region and the social protection of households by 2030,
- Lay the foundations for a multilateral partnership around the regional reserve system, making it possible to take up the technical, organizational, and financial challenges to increase the region's response capacity in the face of cyclical crises, and to identify the areas of a strengthened coordination of food and nutritional assistance with the international humanitarian community.

Attendance is open to all food storage stakeholders, including national (Member States), regional (CILSS, UEMOA, Networks of Producers' and Women's Organizations - ROPPA, ROAC, RBM, APSS, Gender Network, Women's Network for Conflict Prevention and Management, the private sector, etc.), international (technical and financial partners, UN System Organizations, NGOs, research centers and universities), banks and insurance companies.

The conference will discontinuously take place over a period of 7 days.

The sessions will start at 12:00 pm (GMT) and end at 4:30 pm (GMT).
